Corrective Care Wellness Offers Alternatives to Traditional Care

Tai - Kim Spencer

According to information provided by the company, Corrective Care Wellness, Inc. (CCW) is a non-profit established on the principal that everyone deserves to be well taken care of and to find success in achieving optimal health.

Founded by Tai-Kim Spencer in 2011, this practice existed prior as a for-profit; 15 years, offering alternative therapies. As the economic trends widened the gap between the 'haves and the have nots', Ms Spencer became increasingly aware of the need to establish a way for those hardest hit (primarily women and children), to gain power and maintain better health through alternative therapies. By partnering with Polish, Inc. Ms Spencer converted the practice to non-profit for the upbuilding of community.

Acting as a deep pool of information and immediate relief of various symptoms, CCW offers the opportunity of change in the lives of those choosing to dip into years of successful and progressive experience in alternative therapies. These wellness steps include outlook on self-care and health maintenance; weight loss; control / eradication of symptom-related discomfort and the list continues.

To date there are Bodywork Therapists, Behavioral Health Counselor and Wellness Coordinators on hand to develop action plans for those seeking improved health. The board directors are actively fundraising to expand on current services and introduce future planned programs (See Corrective Care Courier Newsletters on the web: www.correctivecarewellness.com). This is the call for reinforcement as community support is critical. Contact Maria Feliciano with questions regarding donations or volunteering @ 954-270-3519. Those who wish to benefit from service call 704-713-0327.

N.C. Education Lottery transfers $127 million to support education

RALEIGH – The N.C. Education Lottery has made its third transfer of lottery revenues to the state for fiscal year 2012, providing an additional $127 million for education.

The transfer was the largest made in a single quarter in the Education Lottery's history. Transfers for this fiscal year now total $353.9 million with a final transfer scheduled for June. Since the lottery started on March 30, 2006, it has earned more than $2.35 billion for the state.

Alice Garland, executive director of the N.C. Education Lottery, attributed the record transfer to higher than expected sales in the third quarter of the year driven by a $640 million Mega Millions jackpot on March 30 and the continued popularity of the lottery's instant games.

"The additional education dollars come at a crucial time as the state and counties continue to look for ways to preserve teaching jobs and to build and repair schools," said Garland. "More than half of the lottery revenues this year will pay teacher salaries in grades K-3 to keep class sizes smaller.
